HOW TO WRITE A CV

We see a lot of CVs at CaPS. Every year we read and review literally thousands of them, for job, internship, grad school and funding applications. They are from students of all levels representing each of the faculties and schools at McGill. While there is definitely room for individual variation, some things clearly work better than others. Use the information, tips and samples in this guide to start writing and organizing your CV.

GETTING STARTED

What's the point of a CV?

A CV provides a potential employer with an overview of your experience, background and skills to entice them to invite you for an interview. CVs are also often required as part of graduate/professional school applications.

General guidelines

- Writing a CV is an art, not a science. The goal is not to force your content into a particular template, but rather to find a format and style that highlights your experience and strengths. The order and emphasis of your sections should also reflect the level of priority for your reader.
- Put yourself in the shoes of your reader. Can they easily find the information they are looking for? Are the skills and experience you would bring to the organization clearly articulated?
- Use concrete examples when describing your experience. What did you do/accomplish?
- Your CV needs to be consistent and clear in terms of its style and format, professional in its content and overall presentation, and as much as possible, specifically targeted to the position/company/field you are applying to.
- Do your research! For your applications to be effective, you need to demonstrate knowledge of the employer and what they are looking for. Be intentional and informed, not generic!
- Length: In Canada, outside of academia, your CV can be up to two pages. There are a few exceptions, including the management/business sector, which tends to prefer one page. Ask at CaPS if you are unsure about norms for your particular field/geographic area.

The "Master CV" - Your first draft

To make customizing your CV for each application easier, we recommend compiling a "master CV" that includes everything. The idea is to have a comprehensive record of your activities, experiences and accomplishments that you can draw on for future applications. Use the Common CV Components list on the next page to get started.

COMMON CV COMPONENTS

These are the basic components of a CV for a current undergraduate student or recent graduate. While your contact information always comes first, the other sections can and should be presented in whichever order is most relevant to the position for which you are applying.

Contact Information

- Include your full name, phone number and a professional email in an attractive header
- Including your full civic address is optional
- If pertinent, you can indicate a local and permanent address/city
- Include your website and/or edited LinkedIn URL if relevant
- In North America, personal information such as age and citizenship are not included

Languages

- If you speak more than one language, list these in order of relevance to the workplace
- Indicate your level of proficiency (i.e. basic, intermediate, fluent)

Computer/Technical/Laboratory Skills

- List the specific programs/software or lab techniques you are familiar with

Education

- List all degrees you hold or are working on, most recent first
- Include any specializations (major, minor), thesis or honours work
- You can include scholarships and awards as details here, or in a separate "Awards" section

Awards and Scholarships

- List titles, reason for the award (if not clear from the title) and dates

Experience

There are many ways to organize this information. Early on, general section headings such as "Volunteer Experience" work well. However, once you have more experience and want to highlight patterns you have identified, try to strategically use headers for your experience section(s) in order to incorporate key skills from the job description.

General options include:

- Work Experience
- Volunteer Experience
- Extracurricular Experience
- Career-Related Experience
- Additional Experience

Sample targeted headings:

- Tutoring Experience
- Sales and Customer Service Experience
- Outreach and Marketing Experience
- Writing and Editing Experience
- Research Experience
- Leadership Experience
- Performance Experience
- Administrative Experience

Certifications/Affiliations/Memberships/Additional Training

- List any additional certifications or active memberships you hold, along with the dates

Interests and Activities

- Make sure this section is organized and relatively detailed/specific

LANGUAGE, STYLE & FORMAT

Format

Use a simple, clear format such as the example below:

What (your degree or job title)

date-date

Where (school or company and location)

- Details

General guidelines

- Use formatting techniques such as indenting and bold consistently throughout to increase readability
- Use bullet points for your details; long dense paragraphs are hard to read quickly and CVs are usually skimmed in a few seconds, not read word-for-word
- List education and experience in reverse chronological order (most recent first “by end date”)
- Simple, straightforward layouts tend to work best; avoid tables, boxes, templates
- Choose a standard, legible and professional font in a legible size
- Ensure your email address, voicemail message and any URLs are professional in tone
- PROOFREAD your CV carefully for typos, spelling mistakes and poor grammar

Describing your experience

- Aim for a factual, confident and professional tone; avoid embellishment
- Use active, skills-based language and specific examples to highlight your accomplishments
- Start each bullet with an action verb instead of using pronouns (i.e. I, we)
- Pay attention to verb tenses: if you are no longer working somewhere, the verbs should be in past tense, for a current activity, use the present tense
- Add a descriptor for clarity if your title was “Volunteer” or “Intern”, (i.e. Volunteer Peer Tutor, Administrative Intern)

* see the list of Action Verbs at the end of this guide

TARGETING YOUR CV

Keep the following tips in mind to ensure your CV is specifically tailored for each application:

- Read the job description carefully and research the organization to identify the key skills needed
- Use targeted headings (see examples on page 3) which speak to the main requirements of the position
- Ensure your descriptive bullets are prioritized and tailored for the role
- Consider the order of your sections to make sure the most important experiences appear early on
